The charming town of Guatapé is located in a geographically striking landscape dominated by lakes and mountains and offers a host of fun activities including boat trips, ziplines, swimming, kayaking, and climbing. The area is greatly, and somewhat inexplicably, under-visited by foreign tourists, yet the spectacular scenery and ample entertainment options make it well worth the short trip from Medellín.

New resorts, several restaurants, and rental homes along the lake are available for visitors. Each building has tiles along the facade's lower walls in bright colors and dimensioned images. Many of the tiles are tied to the products sold by the shops, or the beliefs of the residents. Others are cultural images of the farming heritage of the community.

One of the must-do activities is to climb La Piedra, a 200m rock formation jutting out of the landscape. The entrance fee is around 10,000 COP and there are nearly 700 steps to reach the summit. The ascent is moderately challenging (it takes about 20 minutes), but is well worth the effort. From the top, visitors can enjoy a chilled beer whilst taking in the spectacular 360° view of the lakes and mountains scattered across the landscape. On a clear
